Developing character, citizenship, personal fitness, and leadership skills to transform today's kids into tomorrow's leaders

Background

- Judaism is one of the larger U.S. faith traditions outside of Christianity. Approximately 1.7 percent of the adult population practices non-Christian faith traditions. Approximately 1.9 percent of the population practices Judaism (Source: 2015 U.S. Religious Landscape Survey, Pew Forum). Regionally, this population is distributed as follows:
  - Northeast: 43 percent
  - Midwest: 11 percent
  - South: 26 percent
  - West: 20 percent
- Jewish worship in the U.S. is generally divided into four major groups: Reform, Conservative, Orthodox, and Reconstructionist, with several smaller movements.
- Jewish participation in Scouting originated in 1916 with the formation of a national Jewish Scouting committee, and Jewish institutions have obtained charters for Jewish Scout units since then under the guidance of such leaders as Mortimer Schiff, Dr. Cyrus Adler, and Frank Weil.
- 2018 membership included:
  - 50 packs with 985 Cub Scouts
  - 61 troops with 889 Scouts
  - 7 crews with 45 Venturers

Religious Principles and Key Terms

- Judaism believes in a single, universal God, uniting all humanity as a single family.
- Judaism believes in the sanctity of human life and the ideal of a human society based on law.
- Judaism believes that all people of good moral character are pleasing in the sight of God.
- Torah: Jewish holy book that represents the first five books of the Tanakh, or the first five books of the Holy Bible known as the five books of Moses
- Halakhah: Represents the Jewish rituals and religious observances that are grounded in Jewish law
- Mitzvot: 613 individual commandments intended to keep the Jewish people holy. Of these:
  - 248 represent positive commandments, or what to do.
  - 365 represent negative commandments, or what not to do.
- Rabbinic law: A body of law interpreting and expanding Halakhah and Mitzvot which has developed over the centuries. Rabbinic law can be separated into three groups:
  - Gezeirah: A rule instituted by the rabbis to prevent inadvertent violation of a mitzvah
  - Takkanah: A law instituted by rabbis that does not derive from the Torah (e.g., lighting of the candles on Hanukkah)
  - Minhag: A custom that evolved for worthy religious reasons and has continued long enough to become a binding religious practice
- Synagogue, temple, or Chabad house: Jewish house of worship and learning. Length and content of the service depends on the sect and customs of the community in general:
  - Hebrew is used most in Orthodox services and least in Reform services.
  - Reform services tend to be shorter than Orthodox or Conservative services.
• Kashrut: Jewish dietary laws that govern the practice of eating kosher foods. Many Jews do not eat pork products, shellfish, predatory fish, birds and animals, and certain other categories of food. Kosher food is prepared under rabbinic supervision. Observance by Jewish sects includes the following:
  - Most Reform Jews consider the laws to be outdated and do not follow them; others keep kosher laws at home but not when dining out or in someone else’s home.
  - Orthodox Jews fully obey the laws of kashrut.
  - Conservative Jews tend to keep the laws consistently.

• Shabbat: The Jewish Sabbath is observed from sundown on Friday until sundown on Saturday. Many Jews refrain from performing tasks which are considered to be work on Shabbat.

• Jewish Holidays: All Jewish holiday observances begin at sundown the night before and end on sundown the day of the holiday. Some holidays are observed for two or more days. Significant holidays include Rosh Hashanah, Yom Kippur, Sukkot, Simchat Torah, Purim, Passover, Shavuot, Tisha B’Av, and Hanukkah.

• Worship: Jewish worship services are conducted in both Hebrew and English. They vary in content and length based upon the specific branch of Judaism.
